While watching a baseball game at Steinmetz Saturday afternoon H. C. Franklin was run over by one of the players, Sam Yeager, and got his hip broken. The accident was caused by a foul fly ball. The ball went high in the air and was being watched by the spectators as well as by Mr. Yeager who was making a run to catch the ball. While attempting to get under the ball Mr. Yeager ran over Mr. Franklin and in some way Franklin's hip bone was broken by the impact. The injury is a very painful one and it will be a long time before Mr. Franklin will be able to get out again.

Some few days ago some one stole a set of wagon harness and two collars and a bridle from the barn of E. D. Jarman, east of Roanoke. Mr. Jarman thought his harness had been taken by a mover, and when over at Higbee looking for the mover, a gentleman told him to consult a fortune teller that was in town and she could tell him where the harness were. And after consulting the old lady Mr. Jarman returned home and found the collars and bridles in his cornfield by a large elm tree just where the fortune teller told him that he would find them. She told him the harness were in a barn in Armstrong. She also told him that the harness had been taken by a party that formerly worked for him and were taken for spite and not for gain. James Moss, a negro boy of Armstrong had been working for Mr. Jarman and was discharged some time ago. Mr. Jarman came to town and took Moss back home with him and he finally admitted having taken the harness and said he hid the harness in Armstrong in Wesley Grant's barn. He further said he had told Allen Mansfield, Jr., as to where the harness had been placed and he accused him of disposing of them. He also implicated Bishop Yancy, another boy in the stealing. Mansfield, when arrested denied having any knowledge of where the harness were or of what had been done with them. Moss, it is said, at the time Mr. Jarman turned him off he told Mr. Jarman's little son that he would get even with him. There is a way that these young bloods could be made to tell what they did with the harness.—Armstrong Herald.

About 2 o'clock Thursday morning some one took a chair from the front porch to a side bay window of Charlie Thompson's home on Vest street and from it climbed into the house through the window, after removing the screen. It happened to be the room in which Mrs. Thompson and her babe were sleeping, and Mr. Thompson was not at home, being away on one of his trips on the road. Mrs. Thompson says she did not hear the man enter, but she thinks the first thing he did was to walk across the room to a folding bed opposite the window through which he came, and turn out a lamp that she burns through the night, on account of her baby. She thinks in the darkness he must have touched the bed in which she was sleeping and she awakened to find him at her chiffonier. She says she was badly frightened and could not make up her mind at once the best thing to do. The thought, however, that he would in a few moments help himself to her money and valuables nerved her to turn on the light. The switch was near the bed, and she could turn it on without getting up. The flood of light from the chandelier had the desired effect, as the would-be burglar went out of the open window much quicker no doubt than he came in. So quickly did he make his exit, Mrs. Thompson only caught a glimpse of him after the light was on, as he went through the window, and she could not tell whether he was white or black.—Marshall Democrat-News.
